OVER $118,000 AWARDED TO ELEVEN INDIVIDUALS AND ORGANISATIONS

Carclew has granted over $118,000 across its Project and Development grants for individuals and organisations, and Capacity Building grants offered to youth focussed arts organisations seeking to grow their business and improve organisational sustainability.

Project and Development grants support the realisation of creative projects, skills development and career progression. This round will see $98,772.82 offered to filmmakers, visual artists, theatre companies and a regional media organisation.

Allison Chhorn will receive $10,000 towards the development of her new film After Years, a documentary following Cambodian families who have survived the Khmer Rouge genocide and are now living across Australia, the US and Canada.

"The Carclew grant will allow me to explore a subject which is difficult to talk about - intergenerational trauma amongst Cambodian families" said Allison about receiving the grant.

"Through the medium of film, I hope to develop the work with sensitivity and explore a poetically inventive form that reflects present experiences still carrying the weight of the past."

Regionally, Carclew will fund a collection of projects including Port Augusta's Umeewarra Media Aboriginal Association, with $20,000 to develop Umee TV and produce six short news-style videos covering significant cultural events in the Port Augusta region. All of these will be produced by a team of young locals and broadcast online.

Capacity Building Grants are offered annually to enable youth focussed arts organisations to grow their business and improve organisational sustainability.

Restless Dance Theatre will receive $10,000 to facilitate attendance at a series of national and international market development opportunities, including APAM (Australian Performing Arts Market) at AsiaTOPA (Asia-Pacific Triennial of Performing Arts) in Melbourne, Tanzmesse in Dusseldorf (Germany) and CINARS, Montreal (Canada). While South Australian Youth Arts Theatre (SAYarts) will receive $10,000 to undertake the development of a strategic marketing plan at a crucial time in their growth.

"What we do is important to the development of young people, it builds empathy and resilience, and we want to ensure that as many of them as possible get the chance to experience it" said Managing Director Rebecca Pannell

"Without this grant we wouldn't be able to effectively grow our audience and expand our reach to bring new young people and their families through our doors."

Carclew Chief Executive Tricia Walton highlighted the diverse array of artistic disciplines throughout the round of grants.

"This round of Carclew grants supports artists in film, dance, visual arts, music, performance and print making. The peer assessment panel always has a hard task in selecting the successful recipients, and noted that this was an exceptional round with applications of a high standard reflecting the current competitive environment" said Carclew Chief Executive Tricia Walton.
