Searching the State for vibrant artists

Professional artists are sought to share their bold ideas for creative workshops in photography, performance, film-making, cultural visual arts and crafts, and more.

Carclew is looking for local artists to lead workshops as part of its Explore Arts school holiday program and for WOMADelaide KidZone next March.

The popular and long-running Explore Arts school holiday workshops provide artistic programs and skills development for children aged between five and 15 in artforms including animation, music production, visual arts and circus performance.

The WOMADelaide KidZone is a regular feature at Adelaide's much-loved world music, arts and dance festival, and Carclew will be presenting culturally diverse and inclusive workshops for children aged between five and 12 from March 7 – 9, 2015.

Carclew Chief Executive Tricia Walton encourages emerging and experienced professional artists to submit an expression of interest.

"We know there are a lot of talented artists in this state - people who are great at what they do and can pass on their passion and excitement to the young people who participate in our programs.

"It's also a great opportunity for an artist to expand their experience."

Based in North Adelaide, Carclew delivers a range of exceptional artistic experiences for young South Australians.

"The arts nourish the creative, intellectual and communication skills of children and young people," Tricia said.

Carclew's programs include workshops, events, arts projects, funding programs and skill development opportunities for South Australians aged 26 and under.

Expressions of interest are now open and close at 5pm, Friday 31 October 2014.
